Seamlessly write and edit text – code highlighter and a classifier. Edit text files for Mac, Windows and Linux. Cross platform (on Mac, Windows and Linux) - works on both 32 bit and 64 bit operating systems.

Powerful coding features: Lively editor, syntax highlighter, code fence, strike, code block, bulleted lists, table blocks, quotation and smileys. Export to PDF, Markdown, HTML, CSV. Includes a classifier. Mark Text is a lightweight editor of Markdown that looks like a screen-focused version of Google Docs, but it is a bit more capable. Just like Google Docs, you can type and edit Word, PowerPoint, Excel or CSV files, or you can create documents right from scratch. As noted earlier, Google Docs is similar to Google Drive, with the difference being that the platform specifically designed for word processing offers a look-and-feel similar to the browser. It works with both Android and the web and was made to extend your browser text editing capabilities. Google Docs offers a number of tools, including templates, charts, drawing, even handwriting recognition. When it comes to the editing features, you can choose between a clean and minimalist view, a more styled one, markdown, bullet and numbered lists, and a back version. You can also use Google Docs mainly for collaborative document editing, add comments, track changes, or add math support. Since Mark Text looks similar to

Google Docs in terms of interface, it can be intimidating for users who have not used it before. However, if you check out its main features, you will realize that it is not the most complex editor you can find. The application actually offers basic editing functions such as copying, pasting, undo and redo, but in the same way as Google Docs you can also format your text. The program is distributed in two versions, depending on the operating system and the version. The Mac and Linux version includes basic text formatting tools, like links and bold, tables, circles and strikethroughs, but the Windows version is equipped with other features, including the ability to open and edit CV, flyers, Excel, PowerPoint, Word, Zip archives, PDF, HTML, CSV, or LaTeX files. On the other hand, if you want the program to export your work directly to PDF or HTML, you need to use the Pro version, which is available for $39. 09e8f5149f
